

Environmental Science:

It is the scientific and method logical study of living organism and non-living organism with their environment how they interact and affect each other

Environment:

The word Environment comes from a french word called 'Environ' that means surrounding or encircle.

Environment include living organisms and non living organism that surrounds us and affect our growth or influence our development

According to Environmental protection act 1986

The environment defined as the sum total elements, factors and conditions in the surrounding which may affect the development action of an organism or group of organism such as we human-beings are include

Types of Environment:-

Natural Environment

Artificial Environment

Socioeconomic Environment

Environment has two components

(i) abiotic

(ii) biotic Component